

The MWA has gotten off to a very scientifically productive start. I'll talk about some of the early MWA science results and our ongoing efforts to detect the Epoch of Reionization Power Spectrum. We have confronted a number of issues that are directly applicable to SKA low, including confusion limited imaging, cosmology precision calibration and systematics control, true widefield imaging, and processing of multi-Petabyte data sets.